The city of Lancaster, Pa., is suffering from an epidemic of typhoid fever, attributed to drinking impure water, which has too much animal matter in it for drink but not enough for food.

The round trip fare from St. Louis to the City of Mexico has been reduced to $20, a circumstance which will doubtless be taken advantage of by many of the "pukes" to visit the land of the "greasers."

It is said that the only pet of the ex-Empress Eugenie is a little hedgehog, which she carries with her wherever she goes, in a daisy, silk-lined wicker basket, which she will entrust to no one, but carries herself.

It is said that there is in the Mississippi Valley a system of earthworks extending from the lakes to the Gulf of Mexico. The fellows who built them have emigrated without leaving any record to throw light on the earthworks.

Governor McKinley, of Ohio, went to New York to "pay honor to the patriotic dead." If he was particularly anxious on this subject he could have paid that debt in Ohio, without scampering off to New York to do it. Perhaps that's what took Mr. Harrison there, too.

When the late Secretary Gresham was called into the Cabinet, some of his wealthy friends believing that he could not support the dignity of his station on his salary, placed $50,000 to his credit in bank, but he positively declined to play the role of a distinguished mendicant and put his veto on that proceeding, and on top of that he relinquished the pension which he had been drawing. There was nothing small, pretentious nor shoddy about Gresham.

The Public Schools.

New Hanover county should be proud of those who manage the public school affairs of the City of Wilmington. Each year for several years the public schools of this community have grown both in efficiency and numbers until a better school service cannot be found in any city in the South. All the public school buildings, four in number, have been built anew in the last three years, and now we have four first-class buildings used for this purpose; two by the white race and two for colored children. In the closing exercises of all the public schools which took place recently they were crowded and many people were turned away from each one, which shows the great interest manifested in our public institutions. The STAR wishing credit to whom credit is due in the management of free schools, publishes the following list of those in charge, who each deserve the thanks of the community for their untiring efforts in behalf of institutions of such great importance to those in need of an education and the entire community.

The Half-Holidays.

The Summer half-holidays were inaugurated yesterday by wholesale merchants on Water and Nutt streets closing at 1 o'clock p. m., and were hailed with delight by their employes.

It is hoped and expected that all will join in the movement and thus give their employes a chance for recreation during the Summer.

A Small Fire.

Last night about 9 o'clock fire was discovered in the show window of Mr. I. L. Greenewald's shoe store on Market street. The shoes were on a layer of cotton and it is supposed that the cotton was ignited from a match dropped when the lamp was lighted. Mr. A. S. Holden and Mr. Jas. D. Funeral of the Late Miss Livingstone.

CITY MARKETS.

Vegetables and Fish in Abundant Supply—Poultry Scarce and in Demand.

Vegetables were abundant and sold at reasonable prices. Green peas 15c per peck; beets 5c per bunch, new potatoes 5c per quart; cauliflower 5c per head; asparagus 20c per bunch; onions 5c; and some remarkably large and solid cabbages 10c apiece.

Poultry continues scarce and high. Grown fowls sold at 30 to 40 cents apiece and spring chickens 12½ to 20c each. Eggs retailed at 12½ to 15c per dozen.

The fish market was crowded with carts from the Sounds laden with the finest varieties of the finny tribe, but the hot weather was against the dealers in fish, and prices soon tumbled from 5 to 10c per string to two strings for 5c and less—any price, in fact, that the buyer would offer.

Fresh meats were in good supply and at the usual prices—10 to 15c for beef and 10 to 12½c for mutton and lamb.

RALEIGH NEWS BUDGET.

MINISTER RANSOM EN ROUTE TO NORTH CAROLINA FROM MEXICO.

Gov. Carr Back from Washington, D. C.—U. S District Court—Revenue Seizures—The Law Concerning Druggists Dealing in Liquors—Hottest Day on Record.

[Star Correspondence.]

RALEIGH, N. C., June 1.

Governor Carr has returned from Washington, D. C.

Col. John W. Hinsdale appeared in a New York case recently for the assignees of B. L. Duke. The case was before Judge Andrews, and the amount he contended for was $20,000 and upwards. The Colonel was getting in his fine work when the Judge interrupted him with the information that it was illegal for a non-resident lawyer to practice in the Courts of New York. However this did not interfere with the Colonel, as he quietly informed the Judge that he was admitted to practice in that State in 1866. The Colonel continued. The case was argued for six days, and the Colonel got judgment for $90,000, with interest for two years and fees.

Mrs. Gen. M. W. Ransom, accompanied by her son, Thos. R. Ransom, and daughter, Miss Esther, arrived in the city yesterday, and left early this morning for Blowing Rock.

Young Mr. Ransom said his father had already left Mexico for North Carolina and that his recent sickness was nothing more than a slight bilious attack. The Minister will spend some time at Asheville for the benefit of his health. Some people assert that Minister Ransom's departure from Mexico is incident with the selection of a Secretary of State.

Hon. Octavius Coke will present the Wiley Gray Medal at the Trinity College Commencement in Durham next week. The medal is given to the best speaker in the Senior Class and it is highly prized. It is said that Capt. Maglenn, who was recently displaced as master machinist at the Seaboard shops will be reinstated. It would prove a very popular move on the part of the Company.

Yesterday was the hottest day on record for May. The thermometer ran away up to 98 during the day.

The Federal Court will adjourn to-night in order to allow Judge Seymour to sit on the Court of Appeals in Richmond next week. The civil docket was taken up this morning and passed over. Other cases of importance were only touched upon. Several moonshiners were tried for counterfeiting, but they could not be convicted. Most of those who have been here during the week have returned home, a number of them having jumped their board bills.

All the new policemen went on duty to-day.

Deputy Collector Moffit reports the seizure of several barrels of whiskey on the Wilmington & Weldon road. The goods were irregularly stamped. They were shipped from the West.

The Governor has appointed E. R. Brinkley, of Elm City, and S. L. Ross, of Robersonville, notaries public.

Section 23 of the revenue and machinery act, which reads as follows, went into effect to-day:

Sec. 23. Every person who shall buy for the purpose of selling spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, drugs and seeds shall in addition to ad valorem tax on his stock pay as a license tax two per centum on the total amount of his purchase, in or out of the State, for cash or credit, whether such person shall purchase as principal or through an agent or commission merchant, to be returned and collected as prescribed in the preceding section; and also all druggists dealing in spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, shall on or before the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five, and every year thereafter, obtain a license upon payment of fifty dollars to the State Treasurer, and any druggist who allows liquor to be drank within his place of business shall be subject to all the taxes required by dealers in liquors, and any druggist violating this provision shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor: Provided, that this act shall not authorize any druggist to sell spirituous, vinous or malt liquors except upon the prescription of a practicing physician, as now allowed by law.

A number of local druggists and many over the State made application to-day for license, but there are a great many druggists over the State violating the law, because they know nothing of it.

The case of Mrs. Mary Hawkins to set aside the will of her late husband, Wm. J. Hawkins, is being argued before Clerk of the Court Young to-day.

THE WHARTON MEETINGS

Will Commence To-Day in the First Baptist Church, with Services and Sermon by Rev. Arthur Crane.

The Wharton meetings will begin this morning at 11 o'clock at the First Baptist Church. Rev. Arthur Crane, (one of Dr. Wharton's co-laborers) a man whose work has been signally blessed, arrived in Wilmington yesterday, and will conduct the meetings until Dr. Wharton arrives. He has quite a reputation as a preacher, and is said to be a very fine singer. The music will be quite a feature of the meeting. A choral choir of fifty voices, under the leadership of Mr. Jas. Calder, has been organized, and supported by two cornets, a piano and the grand organ of the First Church, will lead the singing.

All who attend are assured of good music and a spiritual feast.

The three Baptist churches invited Dr. Wharton to come, and these meetings are held under their auspices; but the invitation was extended in order that all Christians might be refreshed and with a hope that our entire community would be benefitted.

All the pastors and congregations have been invited to attend and join in the worship of God. Mr. Oliver asks THE STAR to assure all of a cordial welcome and to urge the people generally to attend these services.

The services to-day will be at the usual hours, 11 a. m. and 6 p. m. Services will be held during the week—the hours will be announced from the pulpit.

Harbor Master's Report for May.

Captain Edgar Williams, harbor master for this port, reports the arrival of the following vessels, with their tonnage, during the month of May:

American—4 steamships, 4 brigs and 10 schooners, with an aggregate tonnage of 7,477. Foreign—3 barks, 1 brig and 2 schooners, with an aggregate tonnage of 1,931. Grand total, 9,408 tons.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.

Offices to Be Removed From Atlanta to Portsmouth—Only a Division Superintendent to Be Left.

A staff correspondent of the Atlanta Journal telegraphs from Macon, May 30th, as follows:

The general offices of the Seaboard Air Line in Atlanta will be removed to Portsmouth, Va.

I have talked to General Manager Winder and have heard an expression on the subject from Vice-President E. St John. Since neither of them denies the rumored removal and since I have other strong and reliable authority confirming it, it may be regarded as a certainty that the offices mentioned will be removed to Portsmouth, and this before the first of July next.

The following are the officers whose headquarters will be changed from Atlanta to Portsmouth: John H. Winder, general manager; V. E. McBee, general superintendent; T. W. Whisnant, superintendent of roadway, and O. L. Cloud, engineer of maintenance of way. A division superintendent at Atlanta is the only substitute which will replace this general removal. Who the man will be has not yet been determined.

The change, I understand, was to have taken place on June 1st, but the Seaboard's $75,000 office building in Portsmouth has not yet been completed, which will necessitate a delay of from ten to thirty days.

In addition to the absence of Messrs. Winder, McBee, Cloud and Whisnant, the removal will take away an office force of perhaps twenty from the railway circles of Atlanta.

High Temperature.

Yesterday was the warmest day of June in Wilmington on record, the thermometer at the Weather Bureau registering the maximum at 100 degrees At other places around town the mercury was a notch or two higher. At Charlotte the maximum was 96; Cheraw, S. C., 98; Florence, S. C., 102; Goldsboro, 98; Greensboro, 94; Lumberton, 100; Newbern, 98; Raleigh 98; and Weldon, 96; making the average maximum for this district of the cotton belt, 98 degrees. The maximum temperature in the cotton region was in the nineties everywhere with the exception of the Galveston district where the average was 88 degrees. There were light rains in the Galveston and Memphis districts, but elsewhere in the region no rain occurred.

Sons of Confederate Veterans.

Sons of Confederate Veterans who attended the first two meetings are requested to assemble at the armory of the Wilmington Light Infantry to-morrow night at 8.30 o'clock. The matter of a reduction of the proposed initiation fee will be discussed.

Carolina Beach.

The season at this popular resort will soon be open. Repairs at the pier have been completed, the railroad has been put in good order and the hotel will soon be ready for the reception of guests. The steamer Wilmington will begin her regular trips to the pier to-morrow.

About the Half-Holiday.

The Richmond State thus expresses itself on early closing:

"The State heartily and earnestly approves the early closing movement in this city. The fact is our business hours in the South are too long anyway. If there were concert of action among the merchants, purchasers could soon be made to do their shopping within reasonable hours and not spread them over the whole day.

But the public is not considerate and usually takes all the privileges it can get, and so long as merchants are indulgent, just so long will the public take advantage. Nobody is hurt, however, by early closing in Summer time.

Last year the early closing movement was very general and it worked admirably, so far as we know. We hope that the custom this Summer will be even more general than it has ever been.

SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 2, 1895

FIFTY-CENT DOLLARS.

We hear much of fifty-cent dollars these days, and much protesting by the anti silver writers and speakers that it would be dishonest to pay a dollar debt with a fifty-cent dollar. As far as the people of this country are concerned the fifty-cent dollar is a pure assumption, for there are no fifty-cent dollars. It is only when we encounter the Government bondholder that the silver dollar becomes dwarfed and ceases to be a dollar. This doesn't affect the dollar which our people take and use in their business, for it passes for what it is stamped for, but it does affect the full usefulness of the dollar, and it affects the value of the bullion out of which the dollar is made. This is not the fault of the dollar, but the result of legislation which made the fifty cent silver dollar which the advocates of "honest money" inveigh so much against.

Who ever heard of a fifty cent silver dollar before the demonetization act of 1873? Up to that time there was no trouble with the silver dollar, there was no talk about keeping up the parity with gold because the silver dollar was as good as gold, sometimes at a premium, and this was the reason alleged for dropping it from the list of coins, because it could not be kept in circulation the price of silver bullion being so high that the silver dollars were bought up, melted and sold for bullion. This was the reason assigned but it was not the honest reason. The fact remains, however, that previous to the passage of that act silver was the equal of gold, sometimes in greater demand, and that we never heard of a fifty cent silver dollar or any other than a hundred-cent dollar.

But admit, for sake of argument, that the silver dollar is really what they call it, a fifty-cent dollar—and measured by the legislative gold price of silver bullion, that is about what it is—in what position does this place the railers at this dollar, who call it a "dishonest" dollar but yet declare that they are willing to see it kept in circulation and performing its money functions as it has been doing for years, that is to say, they are willing to see the American people required to take it, to take it for their products, merchandise, labor and debts due them, but when it comes to the bondholder that is a different matter; he must have a different kind of money, a more tony, aristocratic money, not the plain, every-day, unpretentious, democratic money of the people. He must have gold, and if the Treasury hasn't at command enough to meet his demands it must borrow it from some home or foreign syndicate and pay a big interest for the use of it.

Up to the time of the demonetization—as far as the bondholder is interested—of silver we had the double standard. Since then we have not had a double standard, but we have had a double-standard way of doing business as between the American people and the creditors of the Government, the former of whom is required to take the silver dollar at the value stamped on its face, while the latter isn't required to take it at all or recognize it as money. They talk about honest dealing. Where is the honesty in requiring the American citizen who doesn't own bonds to take the silver dollar for what the law makes it, while the holder of bonds is not required to take it at all, and it is therefore never offered to him? Isn't that a sort of double-standard, or "'alf and 'alf" honesty, as the Londoner would say? By what feat of moral leger-de-main does the Government make it right to require the non-bondholding citizen to take money which it regards as too much depreciated in value to pay the man who holds a bond? If it would be dishonest to require the bondholder to take silver coin in payment of interest on his bonds, isn't it dishonest to require the non-bondholding citizen to take it for the products of his labor, for his labor, or for his debts? The "honesty" that pleads in behalf of the bondholder should also be heard in behalf of the people who don't own bonds.

But some of them say that silver was not demonetized in 1873; that it passes current, buys things and pays debts just as it did before 1873 and is therefore as good money as it ever was. Where then does the fifty cent dollar come in that they are protesting against? Why all this talk against it and this warning us not to beat creditors out of their just dues by dumping silver upon them. No, the silver dollar is all right as far as the people go; they are required to accept it as all right but others are not. It is perfectly square and legitimate for the Government to keep in (a-l leged) circulation $600,000,000 in silver, worth according to the gold standard people, about $300,000,000, which passes at its face value, while it isn't worth more than that much brass or copper to pay a debt due a bondholder. As far as the bondholders goes, that is demonetization absolute, and our colned silver becomes absolutely worthless. Is it honest to discriminate against citizens and require one to take a depreciated money (depreciated by law) which is not offered to another more favored one? Honesty and the essence of justice demand that the Government should treat all people having dealings with it alike, and show no favors to one that are not shown to another, in other words, show no favors to any, but treat all justly.

MINOR MENTION.

The bimetallic sentiment is making progress in the gold standard countries of Europe, and it is now respectfully and seriously discussed where a few years ago it wouldn't be listened to or would be laughed at. In Germany it has made such progress that a resolution in favor of the Government moving to bring about a settlement of the ratio question so as to provide for the use of both metals and a larger use of silver passed both Houses of the Reichstag by a large majority. This was done as a result of a popular agitation something similar to that which has been going on in this country. The masses believe there, as they do in this country, that if silver received more recognition and there was enough of it in circulation, times would be better and their condition would be improved. The main obstacle to bimetallism is England which still adheres to the gold idea, as Mr. Trenholm expressed it, because England is the creditor nation of the world and it is to the interest of her money lenders to keep gold up and silver down, but even there the bimetallic sentiment is growing and thoughtful minds realize that it is only a question of time, and that short time, when England must abandon gold monometallism, and fall into line with other nations. Ex-Secretary of the Navy, Whitney, who has just returned after spending some time in England, in an interview with a reporter of the New York World gives some idea of the growth of this sentiment in the following:

"If they would leave this matter alone a year or two we'd get an international bimetallic agreement. There's a tremendous movement in England now in favor of it. Twenty years ago all Englishmen were monometallists; to-day there is not a single professor in an English university that is not a bimetallist. All the boards of trade in the flourishing manufacturing towns, like Manchester and Birmingham have pronounced in favor of bimetallism, and are very urgent that Great Britain should take action in that direction.

"Then the statesmen. All the Conservative statesmen of Great Britain, with Balfour at their head, favor it. The labor organizations all over England are in favor of bimetalism and anxious to see it accomplished.

"Of course in the City, as they call it—that part of London that corresponds to our Wall and Broad streets—you can't say the city wants bimetallism. But some very strong men there have pronounced views in favor of it. You take Lidderdale. He was managing governor of the Bank of England all through the panic following the Baring Brothers' failure. He's a very strong man and a bimetallist.

"There's no country in the world that has suffered so much from the depression of silver as England. In the agricultural districts the fall in silver has acted as a bounty on the production of wheat in India. It has worked the same way in the manufacturing districts. England has been moving in the direction of bimetallism for twenty years now, and to day the strong sentiment of the whole country is anxious for it."

Mr. Whitney believes that if England were to agree to an international conference the matter of ratio would be speedily settled and that we would have bimetallism in a short while, within a few years, but like others he does not believe that we can establish it and keep it up alone. But there is one thing that this country can do and at the same time maintain the parity, and that is to recognize silver and coin as much of it as can be absorbed, until the eyes of the gold standard countries become open and they recognize silver and thus open the way to unlimited coinage. The sooner other nations, including the United States, move on that line, the sooner England will de driven into it, or lose the trade of the silver nations she does business with.

The situation in the far East is becoming interesting again, with the announcement that fighting has begun in Formosa, and that the fighting was between Chinese and Japanese troops, furnished by Chang Chi Tung, viceroy of Nan King. This means that Chang Chi Tung repudiates the treaty with Japan. No one supposes that Chang Chi Tung did this on his own motion, without consultation with other powers and assurances of backing by them, for he certainly would not atter the recent experience of Chinese armies have the audacity to beard the victorious Mikado and invite another contest on the field of battle. The manipulator of the wires is doubtless Russia, which is using Chang Chi Tung as a puppet, and playing the Republic of Formosa as a ridiculous burlesque, of which Japan will make short work unless she has to tackle Russia, too, in which event the play over there will become a very interesting one, not only to the actors but to the world generally. With Russia in Great Britain will be dragged in in spite of herself, and if Great Britain goes in it is very doubtful if Germany and France can keep out even if they would, for they both would doubtless rather keep out than go in, for they both feel that they would be fighting Russia's battles more than their own. But the curtain is not fairly lifted yet.

The Ohio Republican convention endorsed the Nicaragua Canal, and that was about the most sensible thing it did do.

CURRENT COMMENT.

—— Governor McKinley has lost his grip on his own State, and has, therefore, been relegated to the ranks of the "has beens" in a political sense. The most he can now aspire to is a Cabinetcy, or, perhaps, a mission to some one of the foreign countries which he sincerely believes are our natural enemies—just as he believes that their people are paupers, and should be made to pay our taxes.—Philadelphia Record, Dem.

—— In the Ohio Convention Gov. McKinley was badly beaten. He was not a candidate for any office, but he is the head of a machine, and the traditions of Ohio require the head of a machine to control everything within reach, to give battle to every challenger. So when Mr. McKinley's candidate for governor was beaten, the Governor was beaten. He may have a "solid" delegation to the National Convention, but he cannot trust it. He has ceased to be the sole dispenser of patronage. His own followers will be disheartened, and he will be exposed to treachery. It is a vulgar and sordid game they are all playing, but they know the rules and the risks and they seem to like it.—N. Y. Times, Dem.

WHEN I MEET MY YOUTH AGAIN.

Some time—I know not how or when—
This weary road I journey on
Will lead thro' lands that I have known,
And I shall meet my youth again.
Thro' some old wood my childhood knew
The road, at length, will bring to view
A cottage in a lowly glen,
Where I shall meet my youth again.

And yet the lad of whom I dream
May know me not, for I shall be
To him a deep'ning mystery
Of things that are and things that seem;
From these old scars of time and toil
His heart, albeit, may recoil,
As children's often do from men,
When I shall meet my youth again.

But he shall know me at the last,
And creep into my arms and weep
As I shall lull his lids to sleep
With stories of the changes past;
And ere the morning breaks upon
Us twain our souls shall be as one
And time shall breathe a soft "amen"
When I shall meet my youth again.

Wheat looks well, and oats better than for several years. —— The fruit crop in this section will not be so abundant as was expected earlier in the season. Millions of the young apples have fallen off, nearly all are off of some trees. Pears will be scattering. Though the prospect for a good peach crop is promising.

He has visited the large canneries of Eastern North Carolina and made himself familiar with the details of the business, and has purchased a complete plant of the most approved pattern. Peaches and tomatoes will be the principal fruits canned. Mr. Corpening has on his farm a very large peach orchard and has this season planted out five acres in tomato plants.

THE COOK'S YOUNG MAN.

His Visit Was Attended by a Disagreeable Adventure.

"A cook" asks the sympathy of the public under the following serio tragic circumstances. She writes a long letter on her sad fate, from which we extract the following facts:

Master has a son at the university, and when he went back after the Christmas holidays he left behind a box of cigarettes.

Mistress gave me leave to entertain my young man—who is in the green grocery line and has really excellent prospects of gaining distinction as soon as he has enough to take the corner shop which he has got his eye on—to tea in the breakfast room, and as she was very pleased with a dinner I served up to a party of her friends about a week before she gave me the box of cigarettes the university lad had left behind and told me to give them to Joseph —that's my young man's name. The tea and the cake were very good, and Joseph was in capital temper, and I am sure was just coming to the point of making the declaration I had been expecting for some time.

I said, "Will you have a cigarette, Joe?" and he said: "Yes, I don't mind. Where did you get 'em?" I said, "I knew you liked a bit of good tobacco, and I bought 'em for you."

He looked so pleased and lighted one, and after he had given two or three whiffs there was a hissing noise, a flash and then a bang.

Joe swore, and I shrieked and fainted and remembered no more until I awoke and found the mistress bringing me round with smelling salts.

Joe had gone, and I was told that his nose was blistered and his mustache singed, and that he was in a dreadful temper. He thinks I did it to make game of him, and I'm afraid it's all over between us.

I gave it with the best intentions, but why should people be allowed to sell such things as squib cigarettes, which bring trouble on those that smoke them and innocent parties as well? I think the law ought to prevent it.—London Telegraph.

LADY AND GRIZZLIES.

THE CHIEF OF MOUNTAIN HUNTERS FINDS A HERMITESS.

She Likes the Lower Animals as Companions and Has a Theory Which Culminates In the Millennium—The Old Story, With Romantic Variations.

Among the daring hunters who for years have tramped the fastnesses of the Cascade and Rocky mountains Dave Solberg is acknowledged chief. He is of modest demeanor and no boaster, and yet he has killed in his solitary wanderings more cougars, California lions, wolves and grizzly bears than would suffice to stock all the menageries in the United States. Unlike his fellows, he is a college bred man, is a versatile talker and tells a good story.

To a correspondent who recently met Solberg in Spokane Falls the hunter told the following queer story:

"It was early in September that I started out to fill a Chicago order for a lot of cougar, black lynx and cinnamon bear skins. I directed my course toward the upper Salmon river, my objective point being 200 miles southeast of Pierce City. Besides Ben, a stout Lapwai half breed, my faithful hired man of all work, caterer, tent keeper, etc., my outfit consisted of two Indian ponies for packing service, three old hounds, camp fixtures, two rifles, a shotgun, revolvers and plenty of provisions and ammunition.

"Monday, Sept. 24, will always be a memorable day in my experience. Leaving Ben and one dog in camp, I started early in the morning for an all day trip, directing my steps toward the headwaters of the little stream near which we were camped. We had gone about two miles from camp when Tige and Fan struck a scent and bounded off through the dense thicket. I quickened my pace in the direction the dogs had taken and soon came upon the tracks of what I knew must be a large grizzly bear. Presently, as I anticipated, the hounds brought the bear to bay a few hundred yards ahead. This was clearly evident from the altered tone of their cries. When I came up with the dogs, there, sure enough, was a big grizzly sitting on his haunches and complacently taking in the situation.

"I poised my rifle and was about to fire, when, to my utter surprise, I saw a stout leather strap about the bear's chubby neck, while from the brass ring under his throat dangled a rosette and tassel made of red, white and blue ribbons. Besides the animal's coat was as sleek and clean as if he had just come from a tub of soap and water.

"Was the brute an escape from some menagerie? Was he a household pet, or was I dreaming? None of these, surely! We were in the heart of a mountain wilderness, more than 30 miles from the nearest border settlement and 200 miles from the nearest town ever visited by circus or menagerie. Besides family pets are not made of grizzly bears weighing half a ton.

"I called off the dogs and put them in leashes. Strangely enough, the huge beast plunged instanter into the thicket and shambled off up the creek, while I followed as fast as I could lead the hounds. I could hear the crackling of dry twigs under the bear's feet, and quieting the dogs in order to catch his course I heard a human voice, the shrill, treble cry of a woman.

"'Ho, Dio, Dio, Dio-o!' it came.

"Once more I was dazed. All the fairy stories of bears and wolves I had ever heard or read came back to me, and I was beginning to distrust the reliability of my senses when the cry came again, a good deal nearer and louder: 'Dio, Dio. Ho, Di-o-o!'

"Chasing the hounds to a sapling, I plunged forward. I soon overtook the bear, which paid no attention to me whatever, but lazily walked along as if his business was his own and nobody else's, halting now and then to munch a few berries from the bushes. As bruin and I emerged from the thicket into a partially open space, what was my amazement to suddenly meet face to face a woman—a real, live woman! The apparition was clad in buckskin frock and leggings, with high brogans buckled over her feet, and her head covered with a brown slouch hat, from beneath which streamed her long hair. She was a blond of the most perfect type. She snapped her thumb and finger, and the bear walked to her side, reared up on his hind feet and licked her cheek while she stroked his shaggy coat.

"'Now, sir,' said the woman, 'will you walk home with me and see where I live with Dio and his family?'

"A 20 minutes' walk on a well beaten trail brought us to a limestone cliff a few rods from the stream. This cliff was nearly perpendicular, 40 or 50 feet high, and in its face on a level with the bank of the creek there was a broad opening, or cave, perhaps 10 feet high and 30 or 40 feet deep. Just within was a snugly built log cabin, its front gable end extending outside far enough to catch the sunlight and permit the escape of the smoke from a stick and clay chimney. This retreat was the home of the woman, while a family of bears occupied the farther end of the cave.

"Upon our arrival Mrs. Grizzly Bruin and two half grown cubs made their appearance, all exhibiting the same docile characteristics as the great Dio. A big Newfoundland dog also bounded forth to greet us. The cabin contained three airy and well lighted rooms, a studio, or parlor; a bedroom and kitchen. While we sat at luncheon she told me her history, and I assure you it was only the old story, with romantic variations and practical illustrations. The gist of the whole matter was a love sorrow caused by the interference of unwise parents and resulting in the abandonment of a comfortable home for the precarious life of a recluse. Only two or three trusted friends know the secret of her whereabouts and mode of living.

"Backwoodsmen built her the cabin five years ago, and about that time she bought a pair of grizzly cubs from the Indians and reared them on condensed milk. To this simple diet and the kindest treatment the philosophical lady attributes the wonderful docility of her grizzly pets. Frontiersmen hired for the purpose make monthly visits to the cabin, bringing upon pack animals every comfort and many luxuries.

"The hermitess maintains that mercy between man and man and kindness to the lower animals must constitute the great panacea which is to redeem animated nature, bring back the golden age and hasten the millennium."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Opposition to the New Woman.

The physician was surprised to find the head of the household at the door with a shotgun.

"Why, what's the matter?" stammered the doctor.

"That there medicine you give my wife, she says, is makin her feel like a new woman, and I want you to understand that no new woman business goes in this house. Fust thing I know, she'll be out makin speeches."—Indianapolis Journal.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had Consumption, and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her, and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 189 Florida St. San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching Consumption, tried without result everything else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in Coughs and Colds. Free trial bottles at R. R. BELLAMY'S Drug Store. How Much France Drinks.

Paris is mainly a wine drinking town; but, unlike Marseilles and Lyons, does not consume so much as many of the smaller towns, though when examined in detail the provision seems to be on a sufficiently generous scale. In Paris the annual rate per head is 340 pints of wine, 16 of cider, 21 of beer and rather over 12 pints per head of spirits.

The Parisians are represented as temperate drinkers, though they drink just about as many glasses of spirits as the Scotch, the largest consumers of spirits in Britain, besides nearly 30 times as many glasses of wine as they do of spirits, not to speak of a fair allowance of cider and beer! And at Cherbourg the inhabitants take two and three-quarter times as much spirits as the Scotch, not to speak of cider, beer and wine. As it is to be hoped and presumed that women and children have little or nothing to do with the figures for the consumption of spirits, and as very many men take none at all, some folks must take pretty large doses.

If French topers can, without visible and unpleasant consequences, carry such quantities of liquor, this must be one of the "things they do better in France."—Chambers' Journal.

In French India.

As the evening falls the lights shine through the little casements of pearl shells, and the sound of the guitar or violin is borne upon the breeze; the bell of the cathedral tolls for vespers, and veiled figures of the women can be seen on the shore flocking to the sacred edifice. It was here that St. Francis Xavier preached. His memory is yet fragrant through the land, and most of the people still are Catholic. Presently the moon rises over the Ghats and lights up the distant ruins of the robber fortress, on a lofty and seemingly inaccessible buttress and throws an ever widening beam of silver upon the silent tide of the river. Soon the town is in repose and free from all sound, save the challenge of the sentinels each hour or the bark of the wretched dogs that turn over the refuse heaps for bones and fish offal.—Gentleman's Magazine.

A Bright Suggestion.

"I've bought a bulldog," said Parsnipp to his friend Lessup, "and I want a motto to put over his kennel. Can you think of something?"

"Why not use a dentist's sign, 'Teeth inserted here?'" suggested Lessup.—Detroit Free Press.

THE BUSY MAN.

If you would get a favor done
By some obliging friend
And want a promise, safe and sure,
On which you can depend,
Don't go to him who always has
Much leisure time to plan;
But, if you want your favor done,
Just ask the busy man.
The man with leisure never has
A moment he can spare;
He's always "putting off" until
His friends are in despair.
But he whose every waking hour
Is crowded full of work
Forgets the art of wasting time,
He cannot stop to shirk.
So, when you want a favor done,
And want it right away,
Go to the man who constantly
Works thirty hours a day.
He'll find a moment, sure, somewhere,
That has no other use
And fix you, while the idle man
Is framing an excuse.
—W. H. Hills in New York Ledger.

CHEYENNE.

The sun sinks slowly behind Eagle mountain, the twilight gathers, and Barton's camp is left in wintry darkness. Lights shine in the 50 cabins, saloons, stores and gambling houses, but they are soon extinguished, save in one lone shanty, and the inhabitants of the camp can be seen wending their way to that particular habitation.

It is an occasion of unusual importance. The only girl in the camp, Castella, daughter of Cap Woods, is going to be married to Jim Douglas, and the miners have declared their intention to "celebrate the event proper." The parson from Eagle City has been engaged to tie the knot, and the only fiddler within a round 100 miles is to furnish the melody for the wedding dance. True, he possesses a poor instrument and discourses poorer music, but then he is the only "musician" available, and they must have music. There are plenty of spirits on tap, and everything looks promising for a high old time.

Promptly at 7 o'clock the alleged violinist draws his bow across the strings, and the festivities commence. The largest room in the shanty has been reserved for a dance hall, and as the notes of an old fashioned polka fill the apartment and set the feet of the festive miners going tap, tap against the floor, keeping time to the tune, Castella and Jim begin to whirl around the room, followed by four miner couples, that being all the limits of the room will allow. There being only one woman present, the miners, to use their own expression, have to "stag it," except when their turn comes to dance with the prospective bride.

Castella is a handsome, well built, large eyed girl of 18, and there is not a miner in the company, even among those who have left spouses in the far east, who does not envy Jim his good luck in winning the pride of the camp. Her father is an ex-captain of a New Bedford whaler, who somehow won the heart of a Boston lady of extreme education and culture. When the hardy captain brought his wife and little girl to the wild west, she of the Puritan descent had her rigid ideas of decorum so often shocked by the "dreadful" miners that she finally gave up trying to live in such a region and peacefully died.

Castella does not take after her mother. She likes the rough but kindly miners and has even taken on their uncouth speech. She loves the crude looking town. Every shanty and every foot of ground that goes to make up Barton's camp is part and parcel of her existence. She vows she will never leave the place, and so she is marrying a man who expects to linger and grow rich along with the camp. It is her second love affair, but the first was nearly a year ago and has almost faded from her memory. This one is serious.

The time flies swiftly. Nine o'clock, the hour of the ceremony, is at hand. The miners range themselves on either side of the room. The parson takes his appointed place, the happy couple join hands, and the process of making two one begins. The preliminaries go off smoothly. The voice of the divine is loud and clear.

"Do you, James Douglas, take this woman to be your lawfully wedded"—

He does not finish the sentence. The door opens, and a large, swarthy looking individual steps hurriedly into the room. The complexion and straight black hair of the intruder betray part Indian ancestry. His stern, set face betokens that his errand involves important business, but the greeting he receives is not warm. Clearly he is not an invited guest.

"Cheyenne Joe! Well, I'll be blasted!"

The outburst comes from Ned Belden.

"Yes, it's Cheyenne Joe. I've come here clar from Hecla canyon and beat the record fer fast travelin. Thar's a dead horse outside. I rid him to death, but I hopes it was in a good cause."

He stops speaking, and the gruff voice of Cap Woods is heard.

"Look har, Cheyenne, you was told to make yourself scarce about these diggin's not more'n a year ago, if I recollects right, and I guess I does. What brings you har now? This shanty has open doors for honest men only."

Cheyenne calmly folds his arms, leans back against the door and looks defiantly at his interrogator as he answers:

"You speak of the time when the committee of safety of this har camp give me two hours to git. They claimed that I wuz concerned in the stage robbery at Indian Gulch. They bring no proofs, but they runs me out just the same. Them's the plain facts of the case, but thet's got nothin to do with my bein har. The explanation yer hankerin fer is this: When I was har before and known as a squar' man, I made love to that gal standin thar clingin to Jim Douglas. She wuz sweet on me and swore thet as long as she lived she would never forgit me. When you drove me from the camp, I told her I wuz innocent, and some day when I could prove it I would come back and marry her. She promised to wait, and I believes she tried to keep her word. When, 'way off in Hecla canyon, a good hundred miles to the south, I hears that my Castella wuz goin to marry another man, I sez to myself, my enimies are forcin her to be faithless. So I takes my horses, rides night and day, and har I am."

He stops a moment, but as no one speaks he continues. His voice rises as he proceeds:

"What I want to know is whether the gal is marryin Jim Douglas of her own free will. I wants no one else to answer fer her. Let her stand out and speak her own piece. If she prefers the outcast, I stands ready to fight a regiment. Speak up, Castella!"

The girl starts as the excited man fairly shouts his request. No, it is not a request; it is a demand. She hesitates.

"Don't be askeered, Castella. Speak out. Choose between us. Jim Douglas or me—which?"

The girl finds her voice. She speaks in a pitying tone:

"You knows I used to love you, Joe, but I wuz only a little girl then. You wuz away so long—most a year—and as I never heard from you I thought you must have forgotten me. Then I falls in love with Jim. I'm sorry, Joe, if I've hurt your feelin's, but now I knows I loves Jim the most. Can't you forgive me for not waitin for you? I couldn't help it. I loves Jim so much."

She stops speaking, advances toward Cheyenne and extends her hand.

The proffered hand is rudely thrust aside.

"Fergive you! Why, gal, you've ruined my life. I worked hard and saved my money, expectin some day to make you happy. I've been honest and square, just fer your sake. Fergive you for goin back on me and makin my life one long mountain trail? No. Gal, you ain't no more wuth trustin than a coyote."

The crowd of miners surge toward Cheyenne. Rude hands grasp and handle roughly the man who dares to insult a woman on her wedding day. Pistols are drawn. There is the muffled report of a shot at close quarters. The voice of Castella is heard above the noise of the scuffle.

"Don't hurt him, boys. Please don't, for my sake! He's clear gone mad and don't know what he says."

The rough hands reluctantly loose their hold. Cheyenne's right arm hangs helplessly by his side. Blood drips from his sleeve and forms a shining pool on the floor. Cap Woods steps to the front.

"Boys, it shall be as my gal sez. Thar ain't goin to be any scrimmage on this particular occasion. That ain't my style of celebratin weddin's. Put this pugnacious cuss on t'other side of the door and perceed with the festivities. Out with him!"

Three brawny miners do the ejecting. Cheyenne curses, but does not resist. He realizes that he now holds a losing hand, but mutters that "the game is not out." The door swiftly closes, and the disturber of harmony finds himself lying in the snow, baffled and beaten, with one arm perforated by a bullet. He lies there and listens. The violinist is once more endeavoring to make the old masters turn in their graves. The sound of boots shuffling over the floor can be heard. The dance goes merrily on. He wonders if Castella does not reproach herself for her faithlessness. As if in answer, he hears a silvery laugh. How well he knows that laugh. He can imagine Castella throwing back her queenly head and showing her pretty teeth. He groans in his anguish. Then the spirit of the Indian, which has long slept within him, awakens. With an effort he rises to his feet. His anguish turns to rage. He shakes the fist of his good hand at the shanty.

"Laugh on, Castella Woods," he shouts, "but beware of the Indian. You've let them turn Cheyenne from your door like a homeless cur. I wuz half white then. I'm a white man no more. Laugh now, but ef you laughs tomorrow it won't be here."

The rising wind takes up his wild words and carries them down the canyon. The merrymakers hear him not.

His hand drops to his side, and he staggers forward toward the shanty where joy reigns supreme. He does not enter, but passes it with a muttered curse. He will not openly take his revenge. Like the true Indian, he will strike in the dark. The rain of yesterday has left the snow soft, and he makes but poor headway, but he keeps on a course that would lead him around the mountain. The trail to Hecla canyon is far to the south, but his face is turned to the north. He does not stop until he reaches Devil's ridge. He is weak from the loss of blood and weary from exertion, but his rest is short. He arises from the rock which has served as a resting place, and faint and stiff and sore as he is starts directly up the ridge. His destination is now apparent. Cheyenne is bound for the summit of Eagle mountain.

The wind blowing across the rocky ridge has kept it almost free from snow, and now it forms a clear way to the mountain top. It is a tedious climb. His arm is still bleeding, but Cheyenne stops not to bind it. His teeth are firmly set, and there is a determination in his eye. He must live to accomplish his mission; then death is welcome. Hour after hour he climbs, his progress necessarily slow on account of his weakness. At last he reaches the summit. Far below him lies Barton's camp. One bright lit cabin betrays its locality. The merrymaking must still be in progress.

Cheyenne slowly gathers a handful of snow and presses it into a ball. Then he stops. His face is not pleasant to look upon. He kneels down and rolls the little snowball to and fro, chuckling ominously. It picks up the soft snow and grows in circumference. When it is as large as a man's head, he rises to his feet. He holds the ball of snow poised aloft. There is an insane light in his eye. He looks down at the brightly lit cabin and fairly screams in his rage:

"Yer loves Jim best, does yer? Yer didn't think yer weddin dress would be yer grave clothes. It costs a hundred lives, but no gal plays me false and lives."

The ball of snow leaves his hand and starts down the mountain side. As it rolls it grows as only a snowball can rolling in soft snow. Now it is as large as a cart wheel. A few moments and it is as large and wide as a house. Rocks and earth are following it. The noise it makes is music to the man on the peak. He shouts and dances with the glee of a maniac as he hears the rumble and the roar growing louder and louder. The snowball has started a ponderous mass, consisting of tons and tons of snow, which, rushing along with resistless force, tears up bowlders and bushes and carries them along in its mad flight. As long as he hears the roar of the avalanche Cheyenne screams and curses until he sinks exhausted to his deathbed in the snow.

* * * * * * *

The great back of the mountain lay bare in the morning sun. Where Barton's camp had stood there were a hundred fathoms of snow, and the gulch was as silent as the valley of death. It was as if the mountain were a giant who had let his robe fall at his feet.—Jack Taylor Waldorf in Boston Herald.

Didn't Like Nonconformists.

The Independent reports the following strange declaration by an Anglican curate: "I do abominate all nonconformists as the bitterest enemies of God and man. They are a wretched and rebellious people. I do not of course mean a literal hell when I wished you all to go there if you do not return to the mother church. It was the strongest language I could command to express my thorough indignation at all who dare to stay outside, and I reiterate my statement that I shall not be sorry if you all are literally dashed into hell if you refuse Him that speaketh."

Abou Ben Bunko.

"And you?" asked the angel.

"Write me," said Abou Ben Bunko, "as one who loves his countrymen."—Indianapolis Journal.

SCRAPS AT THE AQUARIUM.

A Sparring Match Between Two Burgalls and the Blackfish's Idea of It.

Fish appear to play and fight something as birds do. Two burgalls in a tank at the New York aquarium the other day spent half an hour in downright skylarking, which was at times a little rough. They would loaf about at some distance apart and then spring around and make a rush for each other, meeting or perhaps halting just before, and balancing in the water, waving their fins as though sparring for an opening. They would look at each other, noses close together, but not touching, and then perhaps one would back off, the other following until the first was pretty near to his corner. Then the one following would halt and go back to his own place.

Pretty soon the one that had backed off would come up again, and the other was prompt to meet him. This time perhaps they would meet—not tip to tip of their noses, for the end of the fish's nose is extremely sensitive, and he never runs it against anything if he can help it—their noses side to side, and then each would push for all he knew how. They would push until their heads overlapped about one-third of their length back from their noses. Then all of a sudden they would flash apart as though one or the other had hit the other a heavy blow and the referee had called time at the same moment.

One fish seemed to win almost every round, but the other didn't seem to care much for that. He came to the scratch again every time. Sometimes they skirmished a little, and sometimes they closed at once. The contest was at a point in the water to the left of the center of the tank. The fish that generally won staid in that corner, so that he hadn't far to go after the rounds. He just loafed about until the other fish came up again. But the other fish went farther and farther away after each round, until finally he took a little more time between the rounds, and after each round went over into the right hand corner of the tank as far as he could go.

Over on the right hand side of the tank, close against the side and lying partly under a leaf of sea lettuce, was a staid blackfish. He had lain there soberly all through the skylarking and never moved. But once, when the burgall that was getting the worst of it was lounging back to his corner, he got out of his course a little and swung around near the blackfish. The blackfish made a jump at the burgall instantly, saying as plainly as anybody could:

"None o' your nonsense around here!"

The burgall jumped out of the angry blackfish's way, and the blackfish backed down under the sea lettuce again.

But the burgall wasn't disturbed by the cranky old blackfish. He swung around up in his corner, drew a long breath and took a little rest. A minute later he was down in the opposite corner again, nose to nose with the other burgall.—New York Sun.

Secret Trade Processes.

The oldest secret trade processes now in existence are considered to be the manufacture of Chinese red, or vermilion, and that method of inlaying the hardest steel with gold and silver which seems to have been practiced at Damascus ages ago and is known only to the Syrian smiths and their pupils even to this day.

AT HIS OWN GAME.

Cyril Danvers was bidding her goodby in the garden.

"Well, it has been a pleasant month anyway," he said at last, urged thereto by a desperate feeling that he must say something at all hazards.

"Yes," Elaine assented dreamily, "very pleasant."

Her serene, unconscious eyes gazed straight before her into the hazy distance with a rapt, faraway expression.

"And, like all pleasant things," Cyril went on in the same desperate way, "it must come to an end, I suppose. All pleasant things come to an end, don't they?"

Elaine turned the calm light of her gray eyes full on his face.

"I suppose," she said, "you mean you are going away?"

"Yes," he answered. "I am going back to town tomorrow. I did a good deal of thinking last night, and I—well, I came to the conclusion that—that things were getting a little beyond me."

Elaine's eyes had wandered off to the distance again.

"So you are going away tomorrow?" she said after a pause.

"Yes," he answered, lowering his voice to a tenderly regretful tone. "Are you sorry?"

She contemplated him for a moment with an enigmatical expression. Then, "No," she said. "I am glad, because if you did not go I should have to, and I want to stay a little longer."

And then she laughed.

To say that Cyril was surprised would be to put things with ridiculous mildness. Elaine laughed again.

"You did not expect me to say that, did you? she asked."

"No," he answered, drawing a long, deep breath.

"You expected me to be overwhelmed with utter desolation at the prospect of your going, didn't you? Well, perhaps I might have been, only, you see, I shall still have the tennis and the boating and the fishing and the one thing and another to console me after you are gone, and I am easily consoled."

Cyril said nothing. He only stared at her helplessly, wondering if she had taken sudden leave of her senses.

Elaine saw the look and read it aright.

"I am quite sane," she asserted, nodding her fair head with great gravity and decision. "As sane as you are—saner, perhaps." Then, all at once, she dropped her bantering tone. "Now, let us talk sense," she went on; "let us understand one another."

"I wish I could understand you," said Cyril, with a dazed, uncomfortable sort of feeling that something had suddenly gone wrong with the laws of the universe.

Elaine nodded again.

"You will in half a minute," she said. "Now listen to me. I am going to state two facts. Fact number one—you are tired of me. Fact number two—I am tired of you. That's the case in a nutshell."

Cyril thrust his hands in his pockets and became suddenly and deeply interested in his irreproachable boots.

"By Jove!" was all he said.

"I am tired of you," she repeated. "Don't get cross. I am not rude, only truthful. I am stating a fact. It is my nature. I always get tired of men in the end. It is only a question of time. Most things in this life are, I think.

"Men," she went on reflectively, "charm you up to a given point, and pall upon you afterward. There is a great sameness about them."

Cyril started, as well he might. It was somewhat of a poser to hear his own inmost thoughts and sentiments put into words in this calm fashion. How often had not he thought just what she had said, with the slight difference of substituting the noun feminine for the noun masculine!

"You speak," he said sarcastically, "from experience, no doubt."

She looked at him serenely.

"Yes," she answered, "I do. I know men pretty thoroughly now, which is a great achievement, and I know myself, too—which is a still greater achievement, though you may not think so. It is always the same. So long as I am not sure of a man so long I want to be sure of him. But the moment I am sure of him—in that moment I cease to want him. I never felt sure of you until last night. Until then you had always eluded me, and I could not tell if you were in earnest or not, but last night you showed me that you loved me—for the moment—and that was the end so far as I was concerned." She paused. "I showed you that I loved you, too—for the moment," she added presently, "and that was the end as far as you were concerned. Last night was the climax, and after the climax—to people like you and me—comes the reaction."

Once more she paused.

"By Jove!" said Cyril again.

He could not think of anything else to say.

Truth to tell, he felt distinctively small, and that is a feeling that does not conduce to a man's general good humor at any time. He was beaten at his own game and vanquished with his own weapons. The situation was a novel one, but it lacked the charm that novelty is commonly supposed to possess. This girl, with her angel face and innocent eyes, was not the simple, trusting maiden that he had believed, but a very queen of coquettes, a flirt of a different and more dangerous caliber than any he had met before. Life had its illusions—and its disillusions.

"Don't be cross," said Elaine in a persuasive tone. "Don't bear malice. Shake hands and be friends. I shouldn't have talked to you like this only that I know you are just like me. I don't know how I know it, but I do. Instinct, I suppose—woman's safest guide. I didn't know it until tonight. It came upon me all at once. My convictions generally do. I know you feel just as I feel and think as I think. I know you wanted me until you thought you could have me, and then you didn't want me any longer. Now confess. Am I not right?"

Cyril took the little hand held out to him and prepared to put as good a face as he could upon the matter. It seemed the best thing to do.

"Perhaps you are," he said. "Anyway, I shan't contradict you. It's rude to contradict a lady, isn't it?"

He looked down, and she looked up. Their eyes met. A moment later the fields were ringing with their laughter.

"Oh," said Elaine as soon as she could speak, "it's a clean case of diamond cut diamond, the cleanest I ever heard of. And you know if any one saw our little story in print they would say it was farfetched and improbable and could not possibly happen—forgetting that it is the farfetched and improbable things that generally do happen in this life."—London Truth.

How Druggists Even Up.

In a West Philadelphia pharmacy a visitor, who is on terms of familiarity with the proprietor, remarked chaffingly to the latter, "I presume you cleared 90 per cent profit on that prescription that just went out."

"Better than that," replied the druggist, "That prescription called for three grains of powdered alum in two ounces of water. I buy the alum for about a cent a pound and draw the aqua from the spigot yonder. The actual cost of the mixture was so infinitesimal that it could scarcely be expressed in fractions of a cent. Yet I charged 35 cents for it, and my conscience doesn't reproach me the least bit. Had I given it to him the probability is that the patient wouldn't have used it at all, and in any event its efficaciousness would have been impaired by the knowledge that its commercial value was next to nothing. And there's another side. I compounded a prescription this morning the rare ingredients of which actually cost me nearly $3. I charged $1 for it, and the customer gave me a look which said as plainly as words, 'You're a swindler.'"—Philadelphia Record.

Turkey.

Turkey is properly Turkia, "the land of the Turks." It is called the Ottoman empire from the great sultan, Othman I. The term sublime porte, as applied to the Turkish government, arose from the magnificent gate giving entrance to the imperial palace in Constantinople.

Gas was first used on a large scale in 1798 in the foundry of Boulton & Watts at Birmingham.

A bed supper and breakfast in Paris in 1453 cost about 50 cents.

"In Letters of Gold."

"I wish I could write across the sky, in letters of gold, the one word, 'Savings-Bank.'"
—FRANKLIN.

THIS is what Benjamin said, and he knew what he was talking about. There have been very few men with more sense than this same Franklin. He did not know anything about the Wilmington Savings and Trust Co.; if he had, the idea that he has expressed in such eloquent and forcible language would have only been more deeply impressed on his mind. The plan of giving wage-earners, and everybody else for that matter, the opportunity of saving their surplus earnings and providing for the rainy day that comes in all men's lives, and paying them interest on the money while it is being saved, struck the wise man as a splendid thing. Don't it strike you that way, too? Come in and get a pass book and try it for a while. It is a dead open and shut game. You can't lose anything. You are sure to make something—the interest—and you can get your money when you want it. That's fair enough.

Of all the works of reference now in the market, the Encyclopædia Britannica is not only the most comprehensive, but by far the cheapest, even at

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

July Wheat, Corn and Oats Closed Higher —Cash Corn Lower—Pork Products Weak and Lower.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CHICAGO, June 1.—The first of the month was ushered in with insufferable heat and the complaints from all sections were in the same vein that they have been for several days. Rain was what was needed and it was rain that the country did not get. Everywhere the temperature was in the neighborhood of the nineties and this certainly was not the best thing in the world for wheat that has been exposed to so many vicissitudes of late. The curb price before the opening was firm and higher and the regular trading during the session was at more or less of an advance over yesterday's close. The trade was not large nor was it much other than local. There was some outside orders, but the bulk of these was of a scalping kind. The country speculators were notably absent today, and the theory that he has taken his profits and gone home, finds many adherents. During the morning a short but brisk shower of rain fell and the crowd showed their gratification by selling prices off a few fractions, but in covering later they forced a recovery. There were no English cables, this being a holiday in that country.

Bradstreet's reported exports of wheat and flour from both coasts for the week at 2,426,000 bushels. July wheat opened from 79¼@79½c, declined to 78⅝c and closed at 79¼c—⅜c higher than yesterday. Cash wheat was steady.

Corn—July opened from 53@53⅝c, declined to 52½c, closing at 52⅝c—⅛@¼c higher than yesterday. Cash corn was about ¼c lower, but closed firm.

July oats closed ¼ to ⅜c. higher than yesterday. Cash oats were steady to firm.

Provisions—An extremely moderate business was transacted in product. In fact there were times when they were quite neglected. The hog market was weak and lower, and for that reason a decline in product was excusable. July pork closed 15c. lower than yesterday, July lard 2½c. lower and July ribs 5c. lower.

Domestic markets were quiet and easy.

SPOTS AND FUTURES

New York Sun's Review of the Cotton Market—The Total Visible Supply.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, June 1.—The total visible supply of cotton for the world is 3,674,-553 bales, of which 3,302,353 are American, against 3,326,641 and 2,735,441 respectively last year. Receipts this week at all interior towns 11,696 bales. Receipts from the plantations 15,789 bales. Crop in sight 9,553,393 bales.

The Sun says: Cotton fell nine to twelve points, and closed easy, with sales of 119,300 bales. There was a holiday in Liverpool. Spot cotton here was 1-16c lower, with no sales. The weather at the South was generally clear and warm. New Orleans showed more weakness than New York, and fell sixteen to seventeen points. The Liverpool market is closed for the Whitsuntide holidays.

One firm said: "The best illustration of the spot market condition in America is that New Orleans, at the threshold of the cotton producing country, with her 150,000 bales of cotton in stock, has practically cornered June, July and August, and August there is likely to sell above August in New York."

Yesterday in New Orleans August was only four points lower than August in New York. North Carolina acreage was estimated at 25 per cent. less than last year. Texas and Louisiana crop advices are unfavorable. During the past week 35,142 bales came in sight against 16,811 in the same week last year; total in sight 9,558,393 bales against 7,243,627 at this time last season.

To-day's features: Clear and warmer in most parts of the cotton belt, together with considerable long liquidation for local and Southern account, and a sharp break in New Orleans where there is less said about an impending corner, led to a decline here, and the market closed at the lowest figure of the day. The weather has been warmer and fair for several days in most parts of the cotton belt, but copious rains were again reported in Texas, where they are not wanted, and Texas is, of course, one of the most important of the cotton States. Furthermore, rain is wanted in Arkansas and in parts of Mississippi. It is still contended that the crop is backward and in poor condition. There was no Liverpool news and some operators on the long side preferred to liquidate their holding pending further developments.

The two men were separated by the local editor. The affair caused a decided sensation, but no further trouble is apprehended.

LOSS OF THE COLIMA.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE STEAMSHIP DISASTER ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

Twenty-One Passengers Rescued and Landed at Manzlan—All Badly Bruised—Harrowing Accounts of the Shipwreck.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 1.—The Examiner publishes this morning the following from its correspondent at Mazatlan, dated May 31, via Galveston:

The steamer San Juan has arrived here with twenty-one passengers picked up on Tuesday from the wreck of the steamer Colima. From the passengers your correspondent has learned of the particulars of the dreadful disaster which they say happened on Monday at noon, when the Colima was about forty-eight miles out of Manzanillo and ten off shore. All of those who were rescued are badly bruised. They were all picked up from pieces of wreckage and rafts, with the exception of A. J. Southerland, who had clung to a boat after it had capsized five times and drowned all the others who attempted to escape from the wreck in her. All afloat were lashed by the fiercest gale of years and buffeted by the angry seas for 24 hours.

The steamer was heavily laden and had a large deck load of lumber. When the storm struck her she made bad weather of it, the captain having great difficulty in keeping her head to the sea. The wind increased in fury until it is said to have been the fiercest storm known along this coast in twenty years. The sea rose rapidly. Water was head over the vessel and started the deck load. As the waves rose and the storm increased the management of the steamer became impossible. One of the seas, a mighty wave, struck her with such force that the beams trembled as if she had struck on a reef and most of the passengers thought this the cause of the shock. The passengers were pretty badly stunned by being pitched about, but rushed up on the deck in a panic. Here they met another danger.

The gale tore parts of the deck load of lumber from the fastenings and whirled the heavy planks about with appalling violence. Many were struck and maimed. At least one passenger was killed by having his head crushed by flying timbers. The survivors say that the officers of the steamer were brave and active in this crisis. Captain Taylor stood upon the bridge with the chief officer, Griffiths. On an order Griffiths ran forward to superintend the launching of life-boat No. 5, while Second Officer Langhorn was in charge of boat No. 3. The latter was successfully launched and filled with passengers. Then the ship went down and Langhorn's boat was capsized. All in both boats are supposed to have perished.

Capt. Taylor went down with the vessel and as the vessel sank he blew three blasts of the whistle as a good-bye signal. The engineers and firemen went down at their posts. Night Clerk Berry was in his room and went down with the vessel. Third officer Hanson was among the saved. He sprang from the ship as it went down and succeeded in reaching a piece of wreckage. There he clung for twenty-four hours, washed and buffeted by the waves. He saw men and women sink about him and was powerless to render aid. He saw naked and mangled bodies tossing by and the horror of it made him sick. Hanson says that as the steamer foundered her boilers burst.

THE DAVIS MONUMENT.

Collections to be Taken Up Throughout the South Monday in Aid of the Fund.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

RICHMOND, June 1.—Monday being the anniversary of the birth of President Davis, Honorable J. Taylor Ellyson, President of the Davis Monument Association, has appointed a committee of thirty-two to canvass the city for funds for the Davis monument to be erected here. It is expected that a similar canvass will be made of the cities throughout the South.

The Dispatch will say to-morrow: "To build this monument, much money is needed. The nucleus of the fund has been secured; but the buik is yet to be raised. The chief part of this, it is hoped, will be collected to-morrow—the day set apart by the Davis Monument Association as the most suitable time to appeal to our people to do their duty in this sacred cause; so on to-morrow, throughout the South, it is asked and expected that collections will be taken up for the Davis monument fund."

NITRO-GLYCERINE.

Terrific Explosion at Parkersburg, West Virginia—Damage Estimated at $75,000.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

PITTSBURG, June 1.—A special to the Leader from Parkersburg, West Virginia, says: About 5.30 p. m. to-day this city was shaken as if by an earthquake and a tremendous report startled the citizens. Amid a shower of falling glass the people rushed into the streets and for a moment every one was dazed. It was at first thought the Parkersburg mill, employing several hundred men had blown up. A trip to the river, however, told the story. A large skiff, loaded with nitro-glycerine being taken up the little Kanwha river from Pittsburg, in charge of an unknown man from Sewickly, Pa., and containing 260 quarts of the deadly fluid was pulling into the mouth of Neal's run opposite the mill. The cans were hot and in sandling them a man let one fall, and a terrific explosion followed. The man and boat were blown into atoms, several small pieces of the man's body being picked up hundreds of yards from the scene of the explosion. There were fifty-five quart cans on the boat. The boat was 90 by 10 feet and had on its bow, "Nitro-glycerine explosives" and carried a red flag.

The damage done by the wrecking of buildings, breaking of glass and the wrecking of boats and barges is estimated at $75,000. The business streets of the city were strewn with glass and wreckage. Numerous persons were cut and injured by falling glass and timbers. The greatest damage was done in South Parkersburg. Houses caved in and the plastering fell off the walls and ceilings. Horses were frightened and ran away, and Bedlam generally broke loose in this city. The towboat Heatherington was badly wrecked.

THE WARM WAVE.

The Highest Temperature on Record in New York—Many Persons Prostrated—Excessively Hot in Washington and Other Cities.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star

NEW YORK, June 1.—All records for heat on the first day of June are smashed by to-day's temperature. Never in the history of the Weather Bureau has the mercury climbed to such a height on June 1st. The humidity is two per cent. greater than yesterday, so that the slightly cooler weather is just as oppressive to-day as it was on the record-break-May 31st. The highest point reached by the thermometer to-day was at 4 p. m. when it registered 94 degrees. Shortly after that hour a thunder shower of a few minutes duration sent the mercury down 10 degrees in a few minutes. Twenty-three cases of prostration by the heat were reported at police headquarters.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—To-day has been excessively hot, the temperature reaching the maximum mark shortly after 4 o'clock when it touched 97 degrees. The minimum temperature was 74, at 6 o'clock this morning. At Baltimore the maximum was 97, at Philadelphia, 94, at Syracuse, N. Y. 98, at Chicago, 85. A large number of deaths from heat prostration were reported from various parts of the Northern and Middle States.

TO MAIL STAMPS AND COINS.

It Seems Simple, But There Is a Knack About It.

Demorest says: "How many people know how to mail a stamp in a letter? Nine people out of ten stick it so carefully down that the recipient always loses his temper, and generally the stamp, in the effort to release it. It is really more exasperating than when the sender forgets altogether the stamp he should have inclosed, for then, at least, it is not wasted. Even the most extravagant of us seldom have souls above saving a stamp, for it is, strangely, far dearer to us than the cents it represents. The tenth person sends it loose, which is well enough, providing it does not slip out unseen and vanish, as these totally depraved small things have a habit of doing. The proper way is a simple one. Cut with a sharp penknife two parallel slits at the top of your letter and slip in your stamps, which will thus travel as safely as if in a special paper case. Perhaps you have been in a country village where money orders and postal notes are unknown, and for some reason it becomes necessary to send change in a letter. Cut a piece of light cardboard the size of the envelope, and from this cut circular pieces the size of your coins. Insert the coins and paste a slip of paper across one or both sides."

From Horses to Bicycles.

"It is a common idea," said a Cincinnati horse dealer, "that the change of motive power for street cars and the consequent disuse of horses, thus reducing the demand, is largely responsible for the decline in prices of horses. That is true as to a certain kind of horseflesh, but not the best kind. What affects my business more than anything else is the bicycle. This diminishes the use of a better class of horses—a class not affected materially by the substitution of electricity for horses on street railways. The bicycle takes the place of the gentleman's riding horse, of the lady's riding horse, of buggy and carriage horses and of the youngster's pony. People in general do not realize how disastrous the bicycle has been to the market for these kinds of horses."

We solve this problem in this wise—we under buy and we under sell, that is the whole secret of this wonderful story. We are both hard-fisted country boys; we know nothing but work and are content to say honest labor is good enough for me. Our business has outgrown our own expectation, and to-day we are more cramped for room than ever, although we have just rented the large hall above our store which has 55x85 square feet; then we got crowded and had a gallery built in our store last September and now all the available space we have is completely filled with good, new and cheap goods. Everything we have is value and some things double value. I will tell you a few things: A man's 6-inch brim Maliga Hat 10c each, worth 20 and 25c. A woman's high crown Willow nicely banded Sailor Hat at 10c, worth 25c. 1,200 yards Table Oil Cloth for 10c, worth 25c. all colors and marble. 100 pair Lace Curtains at 50 a pair, 100 yards of Scrim at 5c a yard, 40 inches wide. 50 dozen fine Hemstitched Linen Handkerchief worth 12½c, our price 7c; Ladies' Hemstitched 5c. 100 fine gilt and enameled Picture Frames at 25c is a thing of beauty. 10 pair of Men's fine American Calf, Lace or Congress Shoes at $1.00, worth $1.50. 100 pair of fine Leather Slippers with pattent tips, all sizes, in black or tan at 50c.

We are on Front street opposite the Market House.

MERCER & GAYLORD

ARE GIVING

Bargains

That will Astonish you more than Ever Before.

ALTHOUGH the advance in Leather and Shoes continues all over this land and country, especially at the great manufacturing centers, we had bought out the entire Shoe Stock of H. C. Evans, 115 Princess street, and had placed contracts with manufacturers at old prices, before the rise began, which enables us to hold the prices down, within easy reach of all classes, for some time to come.

☞We come as near fitting the fancy, the foot and the pocket, as any Shoe Store in the land, when the above three essentials must be met in one fit.

It is useless for us to devote much of this space in quoting prices, but we urge you to call at our place and see the Bargains as they are.

We have Baby Shoes, yet, which are going at 10c per pair. Some Ladies' Button and Lace at 50c. Some Ladies' and Misses' Slippers at 35c (yes, leather, at that). Women's Web Slippers at 10c. Men's Calf Boots at $1.50. Men's Heavy Boots at $1.25—and many lots of other goods in like proportion.

We cordially invite you to examine our stock, and respectfully solicit your patronage.

115 Princess Street.
